PLEASE do not remove the ban on cell phones in airplanes. Plane travel is not all that great now, and the thought of being trapped for 10 hours with the din of cell phone conversations all around me makes me give up plane trips altogether.

Our sidewalks are crowded with cell phone conversations, and the aisles of supermarkets resound with similar noise. Please do not open the floodgates and destroy what remains of sane plane travel.

Believe me, I speak for many other people who share my view.

To The Cell Phone Ban Committee:

Please continue the BAN on cell phones being used during flights.

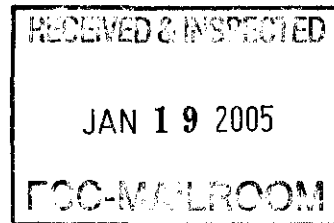

Many people must travel by air. Just since Sept. 11th, they do so under great stress. People (rude) plathering on cell phones would make any trip unbearable.

Of course, the crew's discretion would dictate exceptions in family emergencies, etc.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,

Marie H. Veach

Subject: Cell Phones on Airlines

Having heard and read the possibility that the FCC may lift the ban on cell phone use on commercial airplanes.....

I object to the use of cell phones on airliners. I strongly oppose lifting the ban

I am a frequent flyer with American, USAirways, and Continental as well as international British Airways and Icelandair. As it is, when I fly, both domestic and international, I cannot tolerate the constant chatter between passengers who cannot moderate their voices while talking to one another. After the hectic rush to get ready to leave for a flight, plus the stress that one encounters once arriving at the airport and going through long lines and security, I, and I'm sure others, need some quiet time to just relax and wind down. Many of us read. We certainly do not need to hear idle conversations of people on cell phones.

I do not object to cell phones being used before take-off and soon after landing, as is the rule now.
